Why the New Tariff Became Law
Without His Signature.

NOT WHAT THE COUNTRY WANTED.

The Measure, However, Presents a Vast Improvement on Existing Conditions, and Will Lighten Many Tariff Burdens
That Now Rest Heavily on the People.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The president yesterday sent the following letter to Representative Catchings, of Mississippi, who consented to its publication in view of its public character and importance:

Mr. T. C. Catchings:

My DEAR Sir:—Since the conversation I had with you and Mr. Clark, of Alabama, a few days ago in regard to my action upon the tariff bill now before me, I have given the subject further and most serious consideration. The result is I am more satisfied than ever in the determination to allow the bill to become a law without my signature.

With the formulation of legislation which it was hoped would embody Democratic ideas of tariff reform was lately entered upon by Congress nothing was further from my anticipation than a result which I could not promptly and enthusiastically endorse. It is therefore with a feeling of almost disappointment that I submit to a denial of this privilege.

I do not claim to be better than the members of my party, nor do I wish to avoid any responsibility which, on account of the passage of this law, I ought to bear as a member of the Democratic organization. Neither will I permit myself to be separated from my party to such an extent as might be implied by my vote of tariff legislation, which, though disappointing, is still chargeable to Democratic effort. But there are provisions in this bill which are not in line with honest tariff reform, and it contains in consistencies and crudities which ought not to appear in tariff laws or laws of any kind.

Besides, there were, as you and I well know, incidents accompanying the passage of the bill through the congress which made every sincere tariff reformer unhappy, while influences surrounded it in its later stages and interfered with its final construction which ought not to be recognized or tolerated in Democratic reform councils.

And yet, notwithstanding all its vicissitudes and all the bad treatment it received at the hands of predeceased friends, it presents a vast improvement to existing conditions. It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people. It is not only a barrier against the return of mad protection, but it furnishes a vantage ground from which may be waged further aggressive operations against protected monopoly and governmental favoritism.

It is no place with the rank and file of the Democratic party who believe in tariff reform, and who know what it is, to refuse to accept results embodied in the bill at the close of the war, who are not blinded by the fact that the whole of our entire tariff reform has been staked upon the service of Reparations, of which those who have marched over the world under the deadly hails of trench warfare, and the earnest efforts of the brave in our cause fought.

The true and militant men—the main mass of self-sacrifice and hard labor presented is from passing the new tariff bill to the day when the next bill goes up. And still further improvements can be made in the revision of present laws, and in so far as it is based upon us, we do not stand to the last, which the people of the country, we will repeat and set forth, is one involving the integrity and safety of American institutions. It is the principle of true Democracy to insist they are founded on patriotism, nation, justice and fairness toward all interests. I am proud of my party organization because it is conservatively sturdy and persistent in the enforcement of its principles. Therefore, I do not despair of the efforts made by the house of representatives to supplement the bill already passed by former legislation, and to have enacted upon it such modifications as will more nearly meet Democratic hopes and aspirations.

I cannot be mistaken as to the necessity of free raw materials as the foundation of logical and sensible tariff reform. The extent to which this is recognized in the legislation already secured is one of its encouraging and redeeming features, but it is vexatious to recall that, while free coal and iron ore have been denied us, a recent letter of the secretary of the treasury discloses the fact that both might have been made free by the annual statement of only about $700,000 of unnecessary revenue.

I am sure that there is a common habit of underestimating the importance of free raw materials in tariff legislation, and of regarding them as only related to concessions to be made our manufacturers. The truth is, their influence is so far reaching that if disregarded a complete and beneficial scheme of tariff reform cannot be successfully inaugurated.

When we give to our manufacturers free raw materials we unshackle America's enterprise and ingenuity, and these will open the doors of foreign markets to the reception of our wares and give opportunity for the continuous and remunerative employment of American labor.

With materials cheapened by their freedom from tariff charges the cost of their product must be correspondingly cheapened. Thereupon justice and fairness to the consumer would demand that the manufacturers be obliged to submit to such a readjustment and modification of the tariff upon their finished goods as would secure to the people the benefit of the reduced cost of their manufacture and shield the consumer against the exaction of inordinate profits.

It will thus be seen that free raw materials and a just and fearless regulation and reduction of the tariff to meet the changed conditions would carry to every humble home in the land the blessings of increased comfort and cheaper living.

The millions of our countrymen who have fought bravely and well for tariff reform should be exhorted to continue the struggle, boldly challenging to open warfare and constantly guarding against treachery and half heartedness in their camp.

Tariff reforms will not be settled until it is honestly and fairly settled in the interest and to the benefit of a patient and long suffering people.

Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

JAPAN'S DIPLOMATIC VICTORY.

Great Britain Abandons Her Claim to Extra Territorial Jurisdiction.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—News has been received here by the diplomatic corps that a new treaty has just been negotiated between Japan and Great Britain, by the terms of which the claims of extra territorial jurisdiction by the latter is abandoned.

Negotiations looking to the ratification of similar treaties are going on between Japan and the United States, and with other European nations than Great Britain, and it is assumed that they will now speedily follow the example set by the latter and fully recognize the right of Japan to administer justice in her own territory.

The importance of Great Britain's actions lies in the fact that it is really the recognition of Japan as a fully civilized power. The assertion of extra territorial jurisdiction has always been confined to barbarous and semi-civilized countries, whose ignorance of the first principles of justice and law seemed to render imperative the retention by the civilized nations of the power to administer justice where their own citizens were concerned even as against natives of the semi-civilized country, and within its borders. This has been done through the medium of consular courts, and the system obtains in Egypt, China, Japan, Turkey and many other countries.

Ever since the wave of civilization rolled over Japan her sensitive and proud people have resented the continuance of the extra territorial system, not solely because of its workings, but also because it was a standing declaration that Japan was not civilized, and was a reflection to the world that she had not advanced in knowledge and culture to the point where she could afford to let go of her judiciary. Therefore the action of Great Britain in surrendering this claim to the new treaty is of great importance to Japan as marking a distinct epoch in her advancement to the front rank of nations.

"Let us ask you, Mr. Pullman, whether you do not think a company that pays dividends of $2,500,000 could not afford to share the losses of its employees who have worked for it so long?"

"The manufacturing business is separate from the business of the sleeping car company. I see no reason why I should take the profits of the 4,200 stockholders in the Pullman sleeping car company and pay men a higher rate of wages than was paid in other parts of the country for the same work."

In response to further questions Mr. Pullman said the execution of contracts at a loss was better for the plant than to let it lie idle.

Lieutenant Welch Irresponsible.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Lieutenant Welch, of Company E, Fifteenth infantry, who assaulted Colonel Crofton on Sunday, was declared to be temporarily insane last night by a board of medical examiners who were appointed by General Miles. The examiners found that Lieutenant Welch was not responsible for the assault, and recommended that he be placed in the care of a physician. Welch will be relieved from military duty at once, and placed upon the retired list. The direct cause of the lieutenant's insanity is said to be a sun-stroke received some years ago while stationed at Fort Riley.

A Murderer Attacks a Judge.

ASHLAND, Wis., Aug. 28.—Murderer William G. French made a sensational appearance in the city yesterday. During the recess he was given the liberty to walk about the courtroom. French suddenly spoke to George Durbin and immediately rushed at him, striking and swearing vengeance. Durbin was badly pummeled before the police could subdue French. Judge Parisi ordered him put on bread and water. The prisoner again broke loose and jumped swearing at the judge. He was finally carried sobbing to his cell.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The cash balance in the treasury yesterday, the last previous to the one on which the new tariff act became operative, was $126,485,130, of which $54,999,300 was gold reserve. So far this month the receipts aggregate $56,835,057, of which $21,586,413 was from internal revenue and $35,322,948 from customs. The internal revenue receipts during the ten days in which the president has had the tariff bill in his possession amounted to $19,053,759. The expenditures this month amount to $27,589,000, leaving a surplus of about $8,020,000 for the month to date.

PULLMAN COMPANY'S PROFITS.

It Has Never Paid a Dividend of Less Than 8 Per Cent.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—George M. Pullman was before the labor commissioners for nearly three hours yesterday afternoon. Vice President Wickes, who followed his superior, occupied two hours, and will appear again. In answer to queries by Chairman Wright Mr. Pullman told of the contracts for work undertaken by the company at a loss in order that the men might be kept at work. He said that on a bid for cars for the Long Island railroad he put in a bid for something between $300 and $400 a car below actual cost rather than have the men idle. Up to the time of the strike the company had lost more than $50,000 in pursuit of this policy.

Judge Worthington brought out the fact that the company's original capital stock of $1,000,000 in 1867 had increased to $36,000,000, that the company had paid dividends of 12 per cent. during the first two years of its organization, 9½ per cent. during the next two years, and 8 per cent. annually since, and at the same time had accumulated a surplus amounting to $35,000. He also elicited the statement that the stock of the Pullman Land association was entirely in the hands of the Pullman Palace Car company.

Mr. Pullman said he remembered no formal attempt to get him to arbitrate with the men. He had declared his willingness to arbitrate.

After getting an admission that for the whole year the company had made money and paid for the year 8 per cent. or $2,400,000 in dividends, Judge Worthington said:

"Has the Pullman company during the years of its prosperity ever advanced the wages of its employees voluntarily?"

"I do not know as to that. It has always sought to pay fair wages."

"What do you see that is objectionable in submitting a difference like this to arbitration?"

"The question as to whether our shops should continue to run at a loss is a thing that could not be arbitrated. It violates the principle that a man has a right to manage his own business."

"Let us ask you, Mr. Pullman, whether you do not think a company that pays dividends of $2,500,000 could not afford to share the losses of its employees who have worked for it so long?"

"The manufacturing business is separate from the business of the sleeping car company. I see no reason why I should take the profits of the 4,200 stockholders in the Pullman sleeping car company and pay men a higher rate of wages than was paid in other parts of the country for the same work."

A CASE OF BLACKMAIL.

Senator Stewart as Co-Respondent in a Divorce Case.

A "SOUTHERN LADY" IN DISTRESS.

The Senator Says the Wife of Glasscock FirstAppealed to His Charity and Then Threatened Him, and He Has Checked Her and Her Husband.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The statement was published yesterday that Charles L. Glasscock, of this city, had filed a suit for absolute divorce from his wife and that he had named as co-respondent a senator whose name had not been given and whose identity was not clearly shown. The fact became known that Senator Stewart, of Nevada, was probably the senator referred to in the article. An Associated Press reporter asked him whether he had seen the published statement, to which Senator Stewart replied as follows:

"I did, and I presume that it applies to me. About a year and a half ago the woman Glasscock came to me as a 'southern lady' in great distress. She represented that she had five children, that her husband was unable to support them, and that they were suffering for food and clothing. She said she was willing to work in any capacity, and wanted me to get her employment in some of the departments. I tried in vain to secure her a position, as she applied to me several times."

Subsequently, said the senator, the woman came to his office on several occasions and told of her poverty, and on one occasion sent her little girl with a letter. Each time he had given her sums of money. The senator continued:

"Finally she commenced writing letters, assuming that improper relations existed between us, and that I had more to lose than she had. I met her at the Capitol one afternoon as I was going through the corridors, and told her those were blackmailing letters, and that I was from that time to treat her as a blackmailer. A few days after this I received a letter from an attorney, Mr. Carrington, asking if I had any reason to give why Mr. Glasscock should not bring a suit against me for alienating the affections of his wife. I wrote to Mr. Carrington stating the facts for his information, supposing that that would end the matter. But the suit was commenced, and Mrs. Glasscock sent me the subpoena.

"Some time afterwards I received another letter from Mrs. Glasscock stating that she must see me, and that she would call the following Monday morning, and informing me that her husband was in Richmond, Va. By that time I began to suspect a conspiracy, and when the time arrived I had them watched. She came and attempted to get into my office, and had her little girl with her. Mr. Glasscock, her husband, was out in the street near the entrance. The plan evidently was to get into my office and then send her little girl for her husband and create a sensation.

"She wrote me one or two other letters, insisting that she could protect me if she could only see me, and that her husband was at sent, and that it was necessary for her to see me before he returned. On my way to the station I was brought to me by her little boy. The Captain, S. C. and her husband were there afterward. They hunted for me in police stations for several days. The plan, as I learned, was that

MOWBRAY URGES VIOLENCE.

He Tells Anarchists to Learn to Shoot and Then Shoot to Kill.

"Johnny, get your gun," is the advice the English anarchist Charles Wilfred Mowbray is at present giving to each follower of the red flag in America. "Why don't you procure guns and learn to shoot? Then shoot to kill, but if you can't kill, don't shoot," is what he is reported to have said at a recent meeting in Newark, N. J. Mowbray is a very intelligent tailor who has been in the anarchist business for about 15 of his 38 years. He is considered a dangerous man in England and has been imprisoned repeatedly on account of his speeches urging violence.

He is the publisher of an English paper called The Commonwealth, and he and the editor, D. J. Nicoll, were arrested in 1892 for printing an article advocating the murder of Justice Hawkins, Inspector Melville and the home secretary. Mowbray's responsibility for the article was not shown, and he was acquitted, but Editor Nicoll went to jail for 18 months. It is said, however, that Mowbray has been imprisoned five times for making violent speeches in England. Not long ago he came to America for the purpose of spreading the propaganda of anarchism and becoming a citizen of the United States, providing he found a good field of labor here.

The imprisonment of John Most, Emma Goldman and other anarchists for urging violence in New York has led Mowbray to be very conservative thus far in his speeches in the metropolis. In a recent address he counseled his hearers to "place more reliance on mental than on physical dynamite." The abolition of the capitalist, he believes, will greatly improve the condition of labor, and this result can be brought about by a general strike that will completely paralyze all industry and force the capitalists to come to terms and divide with labor the fruits of labor's toil. Governments as they exist today, he says, exist solely to protect the property class against the propertyless class, and as liberty and government are impossible together he believes a system of no government will be finally established by a tremendous upheaval of society. Mowbray is a fluent and eloquent talker, but he and the letter II are total strangers.

ATCHISON'S NEW RECEIVER.

Aldace F. Walker's Successful Career as Soldier, Lawyer and Railroad Manager.

The statement of Expert Accountant Stephen Little that during the past four years the earnings of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad have been overestimated more than $7,000,000 and that the road has entered into pooling and rebate arrangements with other big lines caused a great flurry in railroad circles recently and resulted in the resignation of President and Receiver J. W. Reinhardt. Except Little examined the books of the road at the request of the Atchison protective reorganization committee, and his revelations resulted in the immediate retirement of President Reinhardt and the appointment of Aldace F. Walker as receiver of the Atchison property.

According to Expert Little's report, the officials of the road have not only induced investors to buy the road's stock by misrepresenting its earnings, but they have violated the interstate commerce act by the payment of rebates and by the pooling of traffic with other companies, the main evils the act is designed to prevent.

The report also shows that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific have been systematically violating the law.

Aldace F. Walker, the road's new receiver, has long held high rank in the railroad world. He was born in Rutland, Vt., about 52 years ago and is tall and commanding figure. He was graduated from Middlebury college in 1862 and at once entered the Federal army as a private. He served with gallantry, was severely wounded and left the service a lieutenant colonel of the Eleventh Vermont infantry. After the war he was admitted to the bar and practiced law in New York with the late Colonel Elliott F. Shepard as partner until 1873, when he returned to Vermont, served two years in the state senate and in 1887 was appointed one of the original interstate commerce commissioners at a salary of $7,500.

When the Western Traffic association was formed in 1890, the leading railroad men and bankers of the country made Colonel Walker chairman of the association at the comfortable salary of $25,000 a year. He has since won wide fame as a railroad manager and lawyer.

THE STUDY OF LICHENS.

A Delightful Branch of Science With Which to Become Acquainted.

They are a difficult branch to study, for the descriptions are shrouded in a mysterious language that needs an unabridged dictionary to translate it, and a good microscope is necessary if one wishes to examine their internal structure and spores. But they are a delightful and easy branch of science to become acquainted with by observation.

They are to be found all the year round on stones and fence rails and on trees. They are easy to mount and are so fascinatingly ugly or beautiful that they make an interesting collection. If almost any wild bit of country there are from 50 to 70 kinds to be found, and even in the most civilized place, at one's own hearth, there are sure to be seven or eight species growing on the sticks of wood laid for the fire. They are so like and yet unlike that they sharpen the powers of comparison and observation until one feels that the keen bladed knife and pocket lens, which are constant companions in a lichen ramble, are dull compared with one's own bright mind.

Lichens—and, by the way, they are pronounced li-chens, not litch-en—grow in three ways, which can be easily distinguished at a glance. There are crustaceous lichens that grow close to a stone or bark and have no leaf part, but are simply a few warts or dots or a stain. There are foliaceous lichens that lie flat. They are green or brown or yellow leathery plants that are something like leaves, and that have brown or red or pink disks on them, and there are fruticose lichens that grow upright like little shrubby bushes, with bright colored knobs.

Go to any birch tree, and there will be seen within a stained circle some curious little black marks like elfin hieroglyphs. They are the fruit spots of a common lichen called, very appropriately, Graphis scripta. Almost any tree one visits will have some irregular circular stains upon it, especially if the bark is quite smooth, and in the center there will be some brown or black or white specks. It is easy to collect such crustaceous lichens by slicing off a thin strip of the bark, large enough to show the outline of the stain, and by writing the name of the tree from which it was taken on the bark, but it is quite a different matter when one sits down beside a boulder.—New York Independent.

SENATOR VANCE MET THE ISSUE.

But the Reporter Failed to Get a Big "Scoop" All the Same.

"I once had an experience," said an old newspaper man at the Press club to a reporter, "with the late Senator Vance which I shall never forget. It was during Crisp's first contest for the speakership, and, as you all probably remember, every newspaper man in town was hustling for inside news. The sources of this, as usual in such cases, were very few, and Senator Vance, who was acting in the capacity of an advisor to the nominating caucus, had to spend most of his time dodging journalists.

"So why did he become that he discontinued taking his lunch in the Senate restaurant and had it served in a committee room. One day, however, I caught a glimpse of him passing through one of the lower corridors on the house side. Determined not to let him escape me, I at once hastened forward, and in the most innocent manner possible began asking him about his health, which was rather bad at the time. He answered all my questions in the kindest manner possible and was about to leave when I said:

"Oh, by the way, senator, who do you think will get the nomination?"

"I don't know exactly," he replied, "but they will have to fight if they want to win."

"Certain now of my information, I began to see the letter I was going to receive from the home office, after they had published my big scoop, telling me in the most flattering terms that the paper had decided to raise my salary on account of my good work.

"Which side, senator?" I asked, almost in a whisper for fear some one would be lurking in the dark recesses and hear the reply which was to make me the most noted hustler for news in the ranks of journalism.

"Both sides," he replied as he disappeared in the door of a committee room.

"And the letter that I looked for never came,"—Washington Times.

The Mexican Agave.

The Mexican agave is a vegetable growth used in making an intoxicating wine. According to a tradition of the country, it was the first plant God made. Another species of the agave is used for the same purpose as soap; its leaves when broken and rubbed together producing a cleansing lather. It is also employed in poisoning fish to be eaten, this poison, like so many others, having no effect upon the person who eats the fish.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually clearing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidney, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50 cent bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Ex-Catcher Bennett's Benefit
Boston, Aug. 25.—Charlie Bennett, formerly catcher of the Boston team, was given a rousing reception at the Sturbridge grounds yesterday by 9,000 of his friends, who had gathered for his benefit to see the champion play a game of college men. The "King of catchers" came out to the field supported on crutches and surrounded by Champion James J. Corbett, Captain Nash, Knickerbocker, and the whole Boston team. The score for the last game was Boston, 12; College, 13. After the ball game there were several athletic contests. Bennett's benefit will be held Saturday evening.

THE CENTURY RUN.
Is This Feat a Benefit to Riders of the Bicycle?

Science and Health: The "century run" is an outgrowth of the invention of the safety bicycle and signifies the riding of 100 miles on a bicycle in a single day. Prior to the general use of the pneumatic tire a trip of this kind was out of the question for any but the most expert and enduring riders; for in only few places could sufficient good roads be found to justify the undertaking. With pneumatic tires, however, in most all localities the century run has become a possibility, though not an easy one, for such a run does not mean a hundred miles on a racing track, or back and forth on the best stretch of road within reach; it implies either a trip of 100 miles straight away or else fifty miles of direct riding and return. To do this in twelve or fourteen hours demands muscle, well controlled nerves and considerable powers of endurance. The very best thing to have with you on a century run is a bottle of Dr. Mifflin's Nervine, procurable at any druggists; it replaces the waste of the hard work nerve and brain tissues and tones up and strengthens the entire system.

One of the most notable of century runs took place on Long Island recently, when nearly 300 riders set out early in the morning from Sag Harbor to ride to Brooklyn. Some 250 of them were able to complete the trip and did so just after nightfall. The distance between the two points is 100 miles. One of the most striking features of this great century run is the fact that eleven women took part in it, of whom not fewer than nine rode the entire distance, one of whom was a girl of 14, who, it is reported, did not appear at all exhausted by her severe experience.

It is certainly a debatable question whether the riding of 100 miles on a bicycle in a day is a good thing. Medical men would pronounce against it on account of the violent heart action which must be experienced, and condemn with severity the parents of the 14 year-old girl for allowing her to enter such a contest, but suggests to all century riders that they have at hand a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, to be taken whenever there is the slightest indication of palpitation of the heart or shortness of breath. The delights of bicycle riding are many, but it is manifestly unwise to undertake century runs with out some such wise precautionary measure.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic electors of the State of New York met yesterday to vote in sending three delegates from each Assembly District to a State convention, to be held at Saratoga Springs on Tuesday, Sept. 5th, 1894, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of placing nomination and voting for candidates for the Constitutional election, and to transact other business as may properly come before the convention.

The tariff bill became a law at midnight, last night, without the President's signature. In a letter to Representative Catherings, Mr. Cleveland says that while in many respects the bill is a disappointment and fails to fulfill Democratic pledges, it presents a vast improvement over existing conditions and will lighten the tariff burdens which now rest heavily upon the people, and therefore, while he cannot approve of it he will not disapprove of it. He does not regard the law as a finality, but as the beginning of a new and brighter era which will ultimately give the country free raw materials and enable American manufacturers to compete for the markets of the world and subordinate the trusts to the legislative will of the representatives of the people.

Free wool is expected to save the people of this country at least $25,000,000 a year. It means cheaper clothing, blankets and carpets,—a reduction of at least ten per cent. in the cost of every article composed of wool.

The most indifferent observer can't help but note the recent large increase in traffic in progress over the Erie's line, both east and west bound. The arteries are throbbing throughout the country with the impulse of better times. Croakers, take a back seat—you have played all your cards and have lost the game.

The work of the Constitutional Convention has not been of a character to win for it popular confidence and approval, and if, as is now proposed, an attempt is made to fasten on the State, for a term of years, an unequal apportionment of Senators and Assemblymen in the interest of the Republican party, the Democratic vote will be arrayed solidly against the new measure and it will be smashed into smithereens as soon as the sovereign people get a chance at it.

The report of the Commission of Engineers on the New York and New Jersey bridge favors a suspension bridge with 2,000 feet span,—the lowest limit of length allowed by the bill authorizing the construction of the bridge. Experts were agreed that a safe bridge of greater span could be constructed, but the enormous proportion of increase in cost no doubt influenced the engineers to favor the company by reducing the span to the lowest legal limit. The report of the engineers must be approved by the Secretary of War before the latter is finally settled and the work of construction can be begun.

The decision of the State Committee that both factions of the Republican party in Syracuse are regular, and its division of the election patronage between them on even terms, does not seem to have brought about even the appearance of harmony. The Syracuse Journal, the organ of the Anti-Belden faction, in its anxiety to score Belden, gives away the secrets of Republican campaigning by saying.

Without the power of money in political organization, Belden would sink to below zero. The sixty odd thousand dollars expended in the last city election, will figure small as compared with the cost of corrupting Onondaga county politics this fall.

Tom Reed and the President find themselves in accord for once. Both demand that the campaign of 1892 be fought on tariff lines, Reed saying there must be no let up until McKinley duties are restored. On the other hand, the President, dissatisfied with the work of his party, demands further additions to the free list and lower duties on manufactured products. Behind Reed, and behind the President is the people, who, if we do not greatly mistake their temper and their purpose, are about ready to sit down, to sit down very heavily, on anybody and everybody proposing to renew this issue at this time. They, the people, with quite unanimous voice, are prepared to say, "Let's try the virtue of what has already been done before we take another step backward, or another step forward."

Great Rush to Withdraw Goods from Bond—Biggest Day's Business in the History of the New York Custom House

BY UNITED PRESS.

New York, Aug. 28.—The rush to withdraw goods from bond, under the new tariff, which went into effect this morning, began at the custom house as soon as the doors were open. In the third division the crowd was so great that it was next to impossible to move about.

While it was not possible to make any exact statement of the number of withdrawals, the business done is said to have been the largest ever done in the custom house in the same length of time. All the clerks were kept on the rush, but in spite of all the work done the crowd during the day increased rather than diminished in size.

TRAMPS AS TRAIN ROBBERS

Passengers on Lake Shore Trains Made to Hand Over Their Valuables by Five Bold Tramps

BY UNITED PRESS.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 28.—A band of tramps boldly attacked two passenger trains on the Lake Shore, last night. While the trains stood at the Union depot five men entered the coaches and made demands upon the passengers for money. A great many passengers complied, glad under the circumstances to get rid of them by contributing liberally.

A passenger on Lake Shore train No. 2 called out of a window and gave an alarm. The tramps ran out of the cars and were found in a lumber yard by officers. One of them, I. F. Angle, who gives his home as Connellville, Pa., escaped from the officers and was captured after a chase. He sent a fusilade of bullets at the police, but was clubbed into submission. The Lake Shore authorities will prosecute the cases, today.

THE ODD FELLOWS' CLAMBAKE.

Busy scenes of Preparation at Midway

Park, This Morning—The Bake the Best Ever Served in This Locality.

Midway Park presented a lively appearance, this morning, all the employees rushing around getting things in readiness for the Odd Fellows'

Clam Bake. Eighty tables were set on what is known as the "Island,"

each table large enough to accommodate twelve people without crowding.

A corps of pretty waitresses were engaged in setting the tables.

The fires for the bake were lighted

at an early hour.

For several months he has made life a burden to a respectable, hard working colored girl, and by threats and blows had the girl completely under subjection. Winfield Kingsley, a recent addition to the colored population of the city, has been paying the girl some attention and, last night, Livingston met the pair out walking. He became abusive and threatened all sorts of punishment upon Kingsley if he did not cease his attention to the girl.

Kingsley at once applied for a warrant, and Livingston was brought before the Recorder at 9 o'clock, shortly after the conclusion of the Shultz trial.

Livingston was quickly disposed of

by a sentence of six months at hard labor in Albany, and a fine $50, which means fifty days additional confinement after the expiration of the six months' term.

It so delighted many who partook of the noon bake that they declared their intention to remain for the evening feast.

After the dinner, the dancing platform was crowded with dancers and spectators.

Every day witnesses a new transformation of these grounds, making them still more beautiful and enticing.

A gentleman who probably knows more about clambakes as they are served on the New England coast,

than any one in Middletown, remarked on returning, this afternoon, as he rubbed his hand on his stomach:

"It's the best bake I ever sat down to away from the seashore, and that's saying a good deal, for I have eaten at many of them. But I don't see how it can be done for the price charged."

The price charged was the same as at Livingston Manor and other places in this locality, but the small cost of transportation to and from the park, makes the expense appear trifling.

Just how many people are at the park, to-day, no one can tell at this writing and it will be late this evening before the stream going to the park will cease, but it is safe to say that the crowd will be counted by thousands.

The railway company is hauling

the crowd well, as they have done heretofore.

THE ASSAULT ON MR. YOCUM.

Disagreement of the Jury—A Plea of Guiltiness Then Entered and a Fine of $40 Imposed.

The trial of "Mat" Shultz, for assault in the third degree, which was in progress when this paper went to press, yesterday afternoon, resulted in a disagreement of the jury, who

it is understood, stood one for conviction and five for acquittal after three hours' argument among themselves.

A consultation of all the interested parties was then held and the defendant entered a plea of guilty and the case was submitted to the Recorder, who imposed a fine of $40, which the friends of Shultz paid.

The jury in the case was composed of the following citizens: John Miles,

Carl Iseman, W. V. Luckey, Galen

Coleman, E. C. Burhans, Charles

Purdy.

THE RAY'S WORK.

'Of all the beautiful things in this beautiful world there was none that the little ray loved so well as the summer sea. He and his comrades would play by the hour together with the rippling wavelets, darting from one to another in dazzling, mad flashes of light, spreading themselves over the waters, a sheet of molten gold, till a touch of the wind's light lips broke it up into a thousand shimmering fragments. And the waves loved their playmates too, and each, as the rays kissed it, became itself a little golden sun, sending forth its light into the radiant air, for the sea, like a flickle, lovable woman, answers back to all in their own moods and is loved just because she cannot be trusted. Then, where the waves broke on the golden sands or round the clean, dark rocks, the little rays would fill their foam with light till it shone more brightly white than the Jungfrau's crest, and the music of the waves breaking was a joy song for their own loveliness. Laughing, they ran up the smooth sand and embraced with teasing play the small pink feet which scampered away before them, while the sun's rays flashed from their surface to meet the lighter, brighter still, which shone from children's eyes. Oh those were happy days, and as the little ray danced along over the waters he hoped that they never might end.'

But a time came when the voice of the wind sounded from afar. The sea heard it and was troubled to its depths at the new life of power and strength which was tearing within it, while the wavelets far and wide raised their tiny crests, and in ripples of white foam whispered the news one to another. The clouds, too, heard the voice and gathered together at its bidding to spread themselves a thick, dark curtain over the sea and hide from the sun's face the things which were to be. And so the little ray could visit the sea no longer nor join any more in sport with his favorite playmates. At this his heart was very sad, and he took no delight in the other pleasures to which his comrades called him. They told him of the wild games they played with the wind shaken leaves of the forest; of the snow cold peaks which they crowned with dazzling splendor of jewels; of fog laden valleys filled with dream forms of weird, strangest loveliness; of mysteries of beauty revealed amidst the world's most squalid dreariness. But it was all in vain. The little ray longed for his lost playmates and would care for none of these things.

As he wandered sadly among the heavy, driving clouds, losing himself in their sullen masses, searching for some crevice through which he might penetrate, one of them pitted him. "Since you will it so," said she, "I will let you through, though I fear you will find that dreams that are past can never be dreamt again." Then she shrank back from her neighbor, and with one swift word of thanks the little ray darted down theUGH the opening she had made.

Down he went to the sea below and there lay quivering and lost in its black gulf. Oh, what a changed world it was! Above him the tempest hurried along and shouted to the waves as it went, and the waves threw their white heads up and answered back in crashing thunders. "Death, death, and the end of all things!" passionately yelled the tempest. "Ruin!" roared the waves. "Naught is that can withstand us!" a world of darkness and tumult and terrible unrest. The little ray lay where he had lighted, tremulous and afraid, now glimmering for an instant among cataracts of rushing foam and then lost again in the dark depths of the water.

"Ha!" cried the waves when they saw him. "So you are here, little ray. The world is changed since you saw it last." "Changed indeed," said the ray. "Oh, why cannot you be as you were before, my playmates?" But the waves laughed, shaking spray from their crests till the tempest caught it and whirled it mountin high in the air. "Give us the winds for playmates," they cried, "and the men's lives for our sport. Talk to us not of the wretched, spiritless days that are past. The world is worth living in now!" But you were happy then. You rejoiced in the earth's beauty and were happy," said the little ray wistfully. "Becau we knew no better," they answered. "We have learned since then that there is something fairer than beauty, more glorious than joy. Oh, the rapture of fury when we raise the ship high in the air to hurl her down on the rocks beneath—the cruel rocks whom we love, and linger to kiss and infold in our soft white arms even then in the joy of that moment of power. To crush into pieces the mighty vessel with all its wealth and labor of workman-hope, to scatter abroad the heavy fragments, flinging them to and fro in the very seem of our sovereign strength; to watch men gasp in their death agony as we lift ourselves above their writhing bodies, and then to dash down and catch the life from their lips—this is power, little friend; this is power, and the * is no glory in the world like the glory of power."

The ray now fled and wan and trembling as he had done. "Is there nothing, then, left which is fair to look upon in all this waste of waters?" he cried, and he wandered on. "Avon. Everywhere the sun and stars are pale and white, veiled mountains mingling together in tumultuous chaos; everywhere floating fragments of wreck and the stain of earth torn from its parent shore; ruin and destruction and nothing that was fair to look upon."

Far out to sea a woman, with a child in her arms, floated alone in small open boat. Alone they had been saved from a wrecked and sunken ship—saved from drowning, as it seemed, but to die of hunger, and for hours they had tossed helpless at the mercy of the waves. Many a ship had come near them, but the woman's cries were not heard in the howling of the tempest, and beneath the darkened sky the fluttering rag she waved was lost in the spray which enveloped her. So the ship went on. The woman's voice grew faint, and despair was in her heart. "Let death but come quickly," she cried, "and let me be welcome to my child for his father awaiting him at home. I have cried. I have prayed in vain. No help is left in earth or in heaven."

But the little ray wandered on toward her over the sea, and the woman, lifting her heavy lids, saw the coming glimmer on the water. Her breath came quicker, her pale lips trembled, her glance followed swiftly up to the patch of blue sky above, while over her death-like face and in her dulled eyes there broke a light such as the ray had never seen before. At the sight of it now, he flashed back up to the heavens beyond the clouds. "Come," he cried to his comrades, "come and see, for there is something fairer than death that has been before, fairer than the sunlit sea or than the laughter on children's lips." His comrades flocked to his call and pointed down through the crevices in the clouds, widening it as they went. Then they stretched themselves, a broad path of light, from the sky above to the lonely boat, which they bathed in their soft radiance.

Across the storm driven sea, cleaving the waves asunder with stately motion, a great ship came. The eyes of those on board her, wearied with gloom, turned gladly to that bright spot on sky and sea, and turning saw the boat, saw the white face of the woman and her waving signal. So the ship altered her course, and soon the mother and her burden stood safe upon the decks.

Evening drew near. The tempest had fled now, and thus left alone the tired, gray waves, their strength failing and their fury spent, were heaving in sullen impotence to rest. The clouds, falling away from the sky, gathered themselves in soft, changing masses of vapor around the edge of the sea. The sun, sinking lower and lower, called to the rays to come. Sadly they heard the call. They bade farewell to their beloved earth in a passion of fervid color. Upon wave and cliff, mountain and cloud, they raised their glowing kisses, and earth's beauty quivered into new glory, as does a maiden's in her lover's embrace. Then they drew together, a road of golden splendor on the sea, as they crowded westward after their departing king. With slow, majestic motion he sank to rest.

But the little ray hung back. He had found the cloud who had stood his friend that morning, and he waited to give her goodbye. He was filling her now with his own golden glory as he whispered to her of all the beauty which was in the world. Alas, she would stay with it still in the wonder of the night, the great dark peace which he never might know. He thanked her, too, in loving words and kisses till she blushed red with pleasure, and then with tenderness, slow reluctance, he drew away from her. As he went the sun faded, passing in gentle change through every shade of russet and purple till the cloud was left alone resting soft and gray on her twilight couch.

But the little ray was thinking of the light of hope which he had seen in the woman's eyes that day. "Ah," said he to himself, "if I can only shine like that!" And with this wish in his heart he lingered still in the sky beneath, coloring it a green so pure and so tender that to the woman watching from the ship's deck it seemed as if heaven's own spring were bursting into blossom in her sight. But the light lessened, and the color faded, and she remembered that it was but sun tinted vapor after all. She sighed, but the sigh left her lips in a smile, for the child laughing stretched his hands to her face. Lovingly she pressed him closer to her and drew her shawl more warmly round him. "Good night, little one," she whispered. "You must sleep now, for the day is ended. Tomorrow, when the light comes back, you shall wake again." Then she bent her head down toward his face and mingled her smiles with his in a long, soft kiss.

That was the last thing which the little ray saw before he, too, followed the sun to rest.—Pall Mall Magazine.

A Big Dress Order.

"Women play odd tricks on one another sometimes," said a smart American woman the other day, "but the queerest I ever heard of was perpetrated by one social leader in a western city upon another. They were rivals and hated each other accordingly, though outwardly they preserved the semblance of pleasant relations. Every chance that either got to give a dig at the other was eagerly seized."

"But the final and most effective stroke, after which no calls were exchanged, was delivered by Mrs. L.—She sent out cards for a grand entertainment and then took pains to find out what Mrs. F.—her competitor, was going to wear. A gorgeous pink brocade satin was the material of Mrs. F.'s gown, it was ascertained.

"Accordingly Mrs. L.—whose husband was in the dry goods business—obtained several hundred yards of the same identical stuff and draped the wall of all the rooms on the lower floor of her house with it. You may imagine the feelings of Mrs. F.—on arriving in her superb new frock, which she expected to make a sensation. Naturally she ordered her carriage and drove away in tears."—London Tit-Pits.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are instructive. The following is no exception: I had been troubled with heart disease for years, and at that time my physician recommended I was in business, but obliged to give up account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My rest and limbs were badly swollen and I was indeed in a serious condition, so I gave up my business and my attention to the New Heart Cure, and said that he stated he had been afflicted with heart disease and had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong healthy woman. I purchased a lot of the New Heart Cure, and in less than four days I was entirely free from the circulation of poison. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrefied. I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure, one dose a day, and I was much better than I had been in my own right. My recommendation to others are the only valuable remedy.—Mrs. Moran, 100 Madison st., Chicago, Ill.

Out for a Wreck.

"Do you know," he said as he approached a Michigan avenue grocer rubbing his hands and speaking confidentially, "do you know that there is a place up here where they wreck happy homes?"

"No, I hadn't heard of it," replied the grocer.

"Well, there is. They just wreck your home, drive your wife to suicide and scatter your children among strangers."

"How do they do it?"

"Right over the bar, sir. You put down your money, and you call for what you want."

"Oh, I see. Well, I'll keep away from such places, and your home won't be wrecked."

"But, my dear man," continued the stranger, "you don't exactly catch on. I want my happy home to be wrecked. I want the foundation of my manhood to be sapped. I want to drive my poor patient wife into a pauper's grave."

"You do? Well, I can help you."

"But I hope you will sir. If I can get 19 cents, it will start the wrecking business. You surely can't refuse such a reasonable request from a fellow citizen!"

"But I can and do. You get out. You are an old fogy."

"You won't help me to wreck?"

"No, sir."

"Want me to sit up on a pedestal and be a great and good man, eh?"

"Yes, I think you'd better."

"Gimme a nickel!"

"Not a cent! If you don't go, I'll boot you."

"But, my dear man don't you see how—"

The grocer seized him and kicked him and gave him a blow, and he went across the street and turned a corner to say:

"I'll pay you later, you. When I wanted to wreck my happy home and so forth, and came to you as a fellow man, you not only brutally refused to do me, but violently assailed my sacred person. I'll see you later. I'll see you after the wreck. I'll see you in T. X. and as we meet I'll give you the greatest kind of a cold cut Babb!"—Data from Press.

When Miss Parsonage going west from her New England home to pay a visit to her brother in Atlanta, she expected to see many strange things. But I don't care to tell her brother's folks any chance of getting a laugh out of her when she comes to Atlanta to see her mother. She is indeed a good neighbor. I intend to open my eyes open as I guess I shall find them as well as the next one.

True to her purpose, Miss Parsonage expressed no surprise at any of the unusual things she saw in Atlanta in her brother's southern home—so well known to the disapproving north. An ordinary woman, who had anticipated a wild scene, was greatly surprised to witness a girl who could not be accounted for. Miss Parsonage kept all her surprise to herself and vowed to tell every night with her head is where it should be.

One day, it was, she made a slight mistake. It was at the dinner table where a number of local chaps was present. She looked at them, and for once it surprised her to the better. She

"Good God! No! She concluded as she surveyed the diners. There were no bowlers or cravats. I must say the manners grow long and round yester evening over. I seen 'em anywhere since—Yester evening."

Not a safe juryman.

"I should like to be excused, Your Honor, as a man who had been so educated on the law."

"What?"

"I owe a man $10 and want to hunt him up and pay it."

"Do you mean to tell the court that you would hunt up a man to pay a bill instead of waiting for him to hunt you up?"

"Yes, Your Honor."

"You are excused. I don't want any man on the jury that will be like that."—Boston Commercial Ballotin
